RE: Michael McDougle

DATE: January 19, 2017

Opinion:

After the reviewing the documents describing Mr. Michael McDougle's death, I think he died a result of negligence on behalf of the Paramedics, Brandi Wyatt and Derek Moore, in question. Mr. McDougle did not receive an appropriate medical screening exam while in police custody. It is very difficult to assess someone's true health status without having a complete set of vitals. The Paramedics failed to check two of the four vital signs. Mr. McDougle's temperature and blood pressure were not taken and subsequently not reported. Mr. McDougle also did not completely follow commands during their assessment this should have lead the paramedics to question his mental status and prompted them to recommend that he be further evaluated by a medical professional in a hospital environment. The Paramedics were deliberately indifferent to the serious medical needs of Mr. McDougle. In conclusion, failure of the paramedics to transport Mr. McDougle to an Emergency Department to be evaluated by a physician caused and/or contributed to his untimely death on November 2, 2014.
